BUSINESS DEPRESSED BY ACTION OF ITALY

SEARCHING OF VESSELS IN AFRICAN SEAS CAUSES RISES IN INSURANCE PREMIUMS.

WILL END RESISTANCE

Of Turkish Power in Tripoli as Speedily as Possible—Foreign Difficulties May Arise.

London, Jan. 24.—The activity of Italian war vessels in the Mediterranean and Red seas, is causing increasing uneasiness in shipping and insurance circles. Several large insurance companies have been affected during the past two days at Lloyd's in this connection.

Rise in Premiums. A premium of five per cent was accepted to cover the risk of an outbreak of hostilities between France and Italy in the course of the next four months, although apparently there is the danger of such an event, a premium of six per cent was paid on the risk of an outbreak between France and Germany within the next six months.

Italy Is Determined. The Italians are stopping steamships irrespective of their nationality and searching them for Turkish officers and contraband and this is believed to be evidence of the determination of the Italian government to put an end to Turkish resistance in Tripoli as speedily as possible.

Expect British Action. London, Jan. 24.—So far, no action has been announced by the British government in regard to the seizure by the Italians of a number of Turkish officers, including the famous Rindby, from the British steamer "Africa" in the Red sea. However, the declaration which would not permit such seizure has not been ratified by Great Britain, and a move may be made at any time.

Have Ordered Release. The stoppage of the Austrian Lloyd steamship "Bregenz" yesterday in the Red sea, is regarded as likely to lead to an exchange of views between Austria and Italy.

Have Ordered Release. Paris, France, Jan. 24.—A dispatch from Rome says that the Italian government has given orders that the Turkish taken from the French steamer "Africa" shall be released. No confirmation of this has been received in official headquarters.

The committee also demanded a seven hour day.

REPUBLICANS PLAN TO OPPOSE CUT IN DUTIES ON STEEL

Minority Members of House Committee Give Out Decision After Conference With Taft—Causes Stir.

Washington, Jan. 24.—After a conference between President Taft and Representative Payne and Duffell, minority members of the House ways and means committee, Mr. Payne declared the minority would oppose the bill endorsed by the Democratic house caucus reducing iron and steel duties.

According to Mr. Payne the minority would not agree to reduction on the iron and steel schedule unless based on information from the tariff board. President Taft was understood to share the view of republican leaders.

On Public Lands. More than eight million acres of public land now withheld from settlement because of their supposed oil deposits would be available for agricultural entry under a bill favorably reported today by the Senate committee on public lands. It would permit surface entry, reserving all rights to the government.

Madley for Roosevelt. Friends of the administration were surprised today at the announcement that Governor Madley had come out in the support of Colonel Roosevelt.

Governor Madley's support had been counted on by political advisers of President Taft. When the Missouri governor was in Washington several weeks ago it was announced that he had practically pledged himself to support Mr. Taft for re-nomination.

No confidence in the political advisers of the president that Governor Madley was working in his interests that secretary of commerce and labor, Nagel, who comes from St. Louis, practically announced state leadership to the governor.

Wants a Chance. President George S. Dearborn of the American-Hawaiian Steamship company, before the House committee on interstate commerce, today, opposed the establishment of a government owned line of steamships through the Panama canal, or the admission of foreign ships to the American coastwise trade even under the American flag.

Charges Made. Charges that the postmaster general and other postal officials oppress facts and misinform congress as to the safety of the lives of clerks in the railway mail service, were made before the House committee on postal affairs today by Urban A. Walker of Denver, Colo., formerly a railway mail clerk and editor of a postal journal.

Adjourn Hearings. The Stanley steel trust investigating committee today decided to suspend hearings until the arrival of presidents of some of the subsidiary companies of the United States Steel Corporation. Several of them may appear next week.

Tells of Saving. Gigantic economies advanced by President Taft's economy commission in the expenditure of approximately one billion dollars for the annual expenses of the federal government, were explained to the house committee on appropriations today. Chairman F. A. Cleveland, it is said, will advocate the elimination of many offices and important departmental changes.

To Check Immigration. In the hope of checking immigration of American farmers to the Canadian northwest important amendments to liberalize the public land laws were favorably reported today by Senator Smoot from the public lands committee. The enforced term of residence on a homestead would be reduced from five to three years, and a homesteader would be permitted to absent himself from his claim six months every year.

Made No Statement. Jefferson City, Mo., Jan. 24.—Gov. Hadley today stated he had made no statement in Washington or elsewhere that he favored the re-nomination of Mr. Taft.

EASTERN GRAFTERS GIVEN SENTENCES

Swindlers Who Were Convicted of Grafting Given Hard Work in Prison.

Kuehler, republican leader of Atlantic City, who recently was convicted of unlawful participation in the awarding of a contract to a company in which he was interested while he was a member of the Atlantic City water commission, was today sentenced to one year's imprisonment at hard labor and to pay a fine of $1,000.

Kuehler was released on bail pending an appeal for a new trial. The conviction created a great sensation. Thomas McDevitt and George A. Mohr, convicted of violating the election laws in Atlantic City, were sentenced to six months and three months in jail respectively and to pay the cost of prosecution. John Altmeyer, Harry May and Frank Enderlin, who were convicted of accepting money for granting road contracts, were given one year each in the penitentiary, but justice eliminated the hard labor provision in the sentence.

SUPERIOR ADOPTS COMMISSION PLAN BY FAIR MAJORITY

Northern Wisconsin City Votes With Plan to Abolish Aldermanic System—Majority Is 192.

Superior, Jan. 24.—Superior on Tuesday voted to adopt the commission form of government by a majority of 192 out of a total of 2,992 voters. Many electors in each of the fourteen precincts voted blanks through a misunderstanding of the operation of the voting machines. The new form was actively supported by La Follette republicans and looked up as their victory, although the reported stand of Herbert A. F. Schinner of the Catholic diocese of Superior in its favor also materially affected the result. Practically every protestant paper in the city also favored the change, while the saloon men were almost unanimously against it. The better organization and the long campaign on the side favoring the change told in bringing out a heavier vote than was predicted. Enough candidates are already in sight to make the primary campaign one of the hottest ever held here.

Madison in Hot Campaign. Madison, Wis., Jan. 24.—Advocates of the commission form of government now the subject of a hotly contested campaign in this city, declared Tuesday night that the action of Janesville and Superior in adopting the new plan meant the death of the old aldermanic system in the state capital and when the voters declare themselves in special election next Tuesday, the utmost feeling prevails here. The city tax rate was recently raised from $15.50 per $1,000 of assessed valuation and it is charged by advocates of the change that this was directly due to waste and extravagance that would be saved if a commission instead of aldermen were administering the affairs of the city.

Mayor Shubert a Factor. Opponents of the change declare that Mayor J. C. Shubert, who advocates the change and is said to aspire to the liberally paid position of mayor under the new plan, brought about the increased tax rate in order that taxpayers would become dissatisfied and vote for a change.

A large German mass-meeting was recently held, at which every speaker other than Mayor Shubert opposed the change. At another mass-meeting, held in the assembly chamber of the capitol, in favor of the new plan, Secretary of State Fear presided, and this circumstance is causing opposition to the change to charge that non-taxpayers and nonresidents of the city are interfering themselves overmuch in the local campaign. The university element is largely in favor of the change and it is said that the industrial element is divided.

PACKERS CONCEALED PROFITS ON HIDES

Three Millions Made on Hides Kept Quiet and Meat Prices Raised by This Means.

Chicago, Jan. 24.—Although no allowance was made for hides in 1910 and during a part of 1911 in figuring the cost of beef, the books of the National Packing Company show that in that period the corporation received from the sale of hides $2,869,050.67. The sales, by months, as given by William B. Weber, general auditor of the National Packing Company, who began his fourth day on the witness stand in the packers' trial, today, were given to the jury.

The government contends that by not allowing credits on hides in this period, the packers materially increased their test cost on beef and were enabled to raise the price to consumers without showing an excessive profit on their books. Weber admitted that the value of hides during this period varied from four to two cents a pound according to quality.

EXPLAINS THE LAW AND ITS WORKINGS

JUST HOW TO GO ABOUT SELECTING THE FUTURE COMMISSIONERS AND MAYOR.

HOLD PRIMARY FIRST

Two Tickets Will then be in the Field to be Voted on at April Election.

In view of the fact that Janesville has decided to adopt the commission form of government, the requirements of the law and the method of procedure in selecting the Mayor and two commissioners or commissioners will be most interesting. At the request of the Gazette, Mr. W. H. Dougherty, who has given much time to the study of the law has prepared the following statement so that it may be thoroughly understood by all.

The method of procedure in the election of a Mayor and two commissioners is set forth in the law as follows:

The election shall be held upon the first Tuesday in April next succeeding the adoption of the law and there shall be elected at that time a council consisting of a Mayor and two other members, all of whom shall be nominated and elected by the voters of the city at large.

The terms of the newly elected officers shall begin on the third Tuesday of April next succeeding the election. This has the effect of terminating the terms of office of all persons now constituting the Common Council and they will be succeeded in office by the newly elected commission.

A primary election will be held two weeks before the general election at which primary any one can be a candidate who files a petition signed by at least twenty-five qualified voters.

The nominating paper must state whether the candidate is in the field for the office of Mayor or Commissioner and the two candidates for Mayor receiving the highest number of votes at the primary shall be deemed nominated and will be the candidates for the office at the general election.

The four candidates receiving the highest number of votes for commissioner shall stand as candidates at the general election. There will be of course but two candidates for Mayor at the general election and four candidates for commissioner, all others having been eliminated at the primary.

The one receiving the highest vote for Mayor is of course elected and the two commissioners receiving the highest votes are accordingly elected commissioner and they subsequently determine by lot which one shall hold for the short term.

The Mayor is elected for six years, one of the commissioners for four years and the other for two years and after this first election each commissioner will be elected for a four year term. In this way we will vote upon at least one of the council every two years.

The provisions of the law are very simple and explicit and it will be thoroughly explained before the election in April.

To sum up, it means simply this: as many as file the required petition can be candidates for the nomination at the primary, the two receiving the highest votes for Mayor will be the opposing candidates at the general election, while the four receiving the highest votes for commissioner will be the opposing candidates for that office. There is no saving that this law makes that has not been noticed during the campaign, it will save the city the expense of the primary and general election each spring as under the now plan we will hold elections but once in two years instead of every year as heretofore.

ELECTION CLEANEST HELD IN JANESVILLE

Chief of Police George Appleby Pleased With Manner in Which It Was Conducted—But One Arrest.

"Yesterday's election was the cleanest I have ever seen conducted in Janesville," declared Chief of Police Appleby in remarking on the subject this afternoon. "But one man was arrested for drunkenness and there was no sign of bottles of liquor being circulated among the voters in the vicinity of the polls. The law with regard to the closing of saloons during the hours of polling seems to have been scrupulously obeyed and no complaints were made that the law was being violated. There were no noisy demonstrations around the saloons after the results were given out. The 'walking election' seems to be a pronounced success."

TRICHINAE POISON IS FOUND IN PORK

Many Persons Made Seriously Ill by Small Parasite Found in Hog's Carcass.

Trichinae poison, a small animal parasite found sometimes in fresh pork has caused the serious illness of one entire family in the second ward, an aged couple living near the city. A woman and little girl in the first ward and a neighbor of the family first stricken. It all came from eating hologna sausage made from a half of a hog purchased some few days ago. The meat being only smoked and not cooked failed to kill the parasites in the flesh and the sudden and violent sickness followed the eating of it. The first family stricken, a husband, wife and two children, are in a critical condition. A portion of the hog's flesh has been sent to Madison, the hygienic laboratory for analysis but no report has been made as yet on what was found. Another family which purchased the other half of the same hog, cooked their meat and suffered no inconvenience. The little parasite is sometimes found in fresh pork and is a tiny maggot that is hard to detect even with a powerful microscope.

LINK AND PIN

C. & N. W. BUSINESS SLOWS DOWN AFTER FEW DAYS' RUSH.

Since the rush following the cold weather break, things have been gradually coming down until today it is back to its normal speed again. Only ten extra went from here yesterday which is quite a decrease from a week or so ago. The increased force is on the job all the time these days and very few men are laying off and most of those who are will return within a short time.

UNUSUAL ACCIDENT ON 1021 CAUSES TROUBLE.

Engine 1021, car 529, which so narrowly escaped a bad wreck the other night when the train beam broke while the train was running at a speed of a mile a minute, is in the shops today undergoing repairs. The accident was one which is very uncommon, and was probably due to a flaw in the steel of the beam which could not be seen by the inspector. The truck was pretty badly broken up and had the engine, gone onto the crossing which was just ahead it would probably have resulted in a bad pile up and a serious loss of life. Engineer Schockey and Fireman Summers were running the engine.

To permit the shop force to vote yesterday work was suspended an hour earlier than usual and all those who could vote were let off.

It is evidently a good thing that leap year don't come more than once in four years, or the railroads would have to shut down from lack of help. Several employees of the roads this morning looked as if they hadn't had time to go to bed last night. One of the regular passengers of the Sunset Limited wanted to know when they had started running it in the middle of the night. He came down on the Interurban.

Maehindt Karl Garhart is laying off today on account of illness.

Maehindt Charles Holt returned to work this morning after taking the day off yesterday.

Maehindt Casey, who had his head cut open when he slipped from an icy engine step the other day, were a little today although he did have a sore head.

James Flemming, formerly a fireman on the Northwestern, who left here about three years ago for Montana, returned the other day and dispatched last night, although he is expecting to keep on firing. The saying is that a bad penny always comes back, ought to be added "even from Montana."

Engine 1741 is tied up here today with a broken arch bar and 1744 had to be put on train 586 this morning.

Engine 788 had to be run into the shops this morning and a new pair of wheels put on the tank.

Relics of Past Ages.
An interesting discovery was made recently at Spittal (Eng.) by a number of workmen. While digging operations were being carried on, a quantity of human bones were turned up. This was followed by the unearthing of a number of stone coffins, each containing human remains. The coffins bore no resemblance to the massive sarcophagus recently discovered at Dorwick, but consisted simply of rough stone slabs.

A Moving Land.
One of the broad slopes of Mont Gringuez, France, is reported to have become detached from its foundations, and to have moved over a distance of nearly a quarter of a mile, carrying with it the soil, meadows and woods, and covering up in its passage roads and bridges that stood in the way. A chestnut grove has traveled 500 feet without suffering any apparent damage, but many small lakes have been formed by the damming of the waters.—Scientific American.

Easily Ahead.
An Irishman who was fond of the liquor came home one night all in, the St. Louis Post-Dispatch says. Four or five of his friends carried him out to a graveyard, dug a hole and put him down there to sleep off his jag. When he woke in the morning he climbed out of the hole and looked all around the cemetery. "By jorra," he said, "I'm the first one up, anyway."

Test of Sugar's Purity.
A simple test for the purity of sugar is to burn it. If pure, fire will entirely consume it; if adulterated, it will leave a wash.

MOST SEVERE COLD IS EASILY BROKEN

In Just a Few Hours All Misery From A Bad Cold or the Grippe Will Be Overcome.

Pape's Cold Compound is the result of three years' research at a cost of more than fifty thousand dollars, and contains no quinine, which we have conclusively demonstrated is not effective in the treatment of colds or grippe.

It is a positive fact that a dose of Pape's Cold Compound, taken every two hours until three consecutive doses are taken, will and the Grippe and break up the most severe cold, either in the head, chest, back, stomach, limbs or any part of the body.

It promptly relieves the most miserably neuralgic pains, headache, dizziness, head and nose stuffed up, fever, sneezing, sore throat, running of the nose, mucous catarrhal discharges, soreness, stiffness and rheumatic twinges.

Take this harmless Compound as directed, with the knowledge that there is no other medicine made anywhere else in the world which will cure your cold or Grippe misery as promptly and without any other assistance or bad after-effects as a 25-cent package of Pape's Cold Compound, which any druggist in the world can supply.

OBITUARY.

Gerald Heath Brown. At 217 Gerald Heath Brown, a young man who has resided in this city for the last three years and has been employed as a machanic at the Janesville Machine Works during that time, passed away at 6:50 o'clock last evening after a week's illness with pleural pneumonia. He was taken ill suddenly and very violently, and medical aid was powerless to save him.

The deceased was born in Rich Bay, Quebec, August 6, 1881 and received an education in the common schools and the Sherbrooke, Quebec, business college. He moved with his parents to Wauya Mills in the same province, where he married Dec. 16, 1908. Two years ago last April he came with his wife to this city and has made his home ever since at 407 Fourth avenue.

Surviving and mourning the death of Mr. Brown are a grief-stricken wife, his parents, Mr. and Mrs. William Brown of Wauya Mills, Quebec, and a sister Ruth of the same city. Mr. Brown is expected to arrive here at midnight and funeral arrangements will be made when he comes. The remains will be shipped to the old home for burial.

Gerald Brown was beloved for his gentleness and companionable qualities and highly esteemed for his good habits and faithfulness as a workman. His early demise is mourned by many friends, besides sorrowing relatives.

Reflex-ions

This is the story of a Gas Lamp. Its name is "Baby" and it is intended for use where the parent lamp, the Reflex, gives more light than is wanted.

It has all the merits of the Reflex and some added attractions. For instance, the glassware is kept in place by a spring instead of set screws, thus making it much easier to remove for cleaning purposes.

It is useful anywhere. Chandeliers can be equipped with two, three or four "Babies", and you can light as many as you think you need.

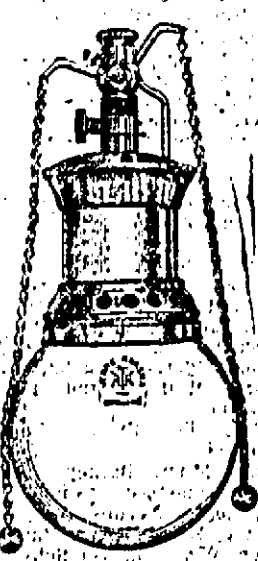

Women will find the "Baby" useful and attractive for their "bureaus", one on either side, hallways, bathrooms, and children's rooms are also appropriate places for them.

They have self-lighting attachments making it unnecessary to have matches lying about the room.

Stop in and see them or send for our representative to bring one to you.

Price, complete, $1.50.

TOLL AND TROUBLE.

The Milwaukee Sentinel discusses the Roosevelt situation in New Jersey and the East in general, as follows:

"Bubble, bubble, toll and trouble." The political cauldron is seething in New Jersey at a great rate, with such prominent republicans as former Governor Fort and Stokes and Mr. Everett Colby openly out for Roosevelt the coy.

"In April the state primaries will enable the expression of presidential preferences. There is an active canvass for Roosevelt as a part of the game to work up that multitudinous and vociferous 'popular demand' for the colonel which will enable him to assume the role of the self-sacrificing patriot who runs in the inevitable and submits to ruin for president because duty calls and he can't resist.

"Governor Fort has no doubt in his own mind that Roosevelt is not unwilling to be drafted. He has had a personal interview with the colonel, and came away with the usual impression that he will not withstand a strong popular demand to accept the nomination.

"Fort adds: 'I do not believe it will be long before he will make his position clear.'

"Well, as to that, he has not, so far as power of language goes, made his position as clear as could be some time ago."

"On a notable occasion he proclaimed to the country:

"The wise custom which limits a president to two terms regards the substance and not the form, and under no circumstances will I be a candidate for or accept another nomination."

"Under no circumstances, mark you!

"Therefore, Col. Roosevelt has proclaimed his profound patriotic conviction in favor of the 'unwritten law' against a third term, and his unalterable determination that it shall not be violated in his favor.

"If Mr. Fort and the Garfield-Mitchell-Bourne type generally can not see his meaning, the fault lies either with their own obtuseness or else with their private conviction that Roosevelt is capable of serving his ambition by apostatizing his principles and breaking his word.

"The third term tradition was too strong for Grant. If Roosevelt should go back on his vigorous proclamation that 'under no circumstances, etc., he would hear, the equivalents of 'War' and 'Apostate' shouted at him from every democratic stump in the country."

CARNEGIE'S VIEWS.

In his testimony before the Stanley committee last week Mr. Carnegie expressed the opinion that a law should be enacted 'so will regulate industrial concerns in the same way as railroads are now regulated.' This is an all too obvious solution and has attracted other public men in the recent past.

Seamless corporations, largely and necessarily monopolistic in their nature, are liable to a high degree of regulation by the state or governmental power. They are chartered only because the interests of the public can best be served thereby. The performance of their functions and duties is the sole reason for their existence; the profits are derived through the performance of such duties. A seamless corporation is obligated to serve every member of society who applies to it, and on terms of equality with all other members.

Because of the public interest, some of these corporations, and railroad companies in particular, have the right of eminent domain (which is an attribute of sovereignty) conferred upon them in a limited degree. The property of this class of corporations is to be devoted entirely to the public service; and it is a maxim of the law that whenever private property has been affected with a public use it is no longer merely private property. Upon this principle stands the right of the state power to regulate and control a seamless corporation, including the regulation of rates, limited only by the Fourteenth Amendment of the Federal Constitution.

Private corporations stand in a different position before the law. They have no right of eminent domain; their property is not devoted to public use; they perform no public functions; their rights and duties are confined (with important but not, in this connection, relevant differences) to those which every individual owes to society. The law cannot compel them to manufacture or sell except as they see fit. As their property is purely private, the public has no more of a right in it than it has in the property of an individual. Would not any attempt to regulate the business of an individual to the extent of fixing prices, etc., in the same way railroad rates are regulated surely be construed as an unconstitutional invasion of private rights?

The distinction is vital, and the extension of government control suggested, therefore, seems hopelessly at odds with the law and the Constitution of the United States.

THE COMMISSION LAW.

JANESVILLE has decided to adopt the commission form of government. By their vote Tuesday the citizens gave a majority of 204 in favor of the proposed change. While the contest waged hot and furious for the past ten days it is all over now. The Gazette believed the city would be benefited by the change in government and the people believed the same way. If their vote is any criterion, they were not blinded by any side issues but voted "yes" or "no" as their best judgment advised them. The campaign has been a particularly clean one as conducted by the friends of the change, and the young men who bore the brunt of the battle should be congratulated upon the results. The contest is over, the vote has been cast, the will of the people is expressed, and the next thing is to get together and elect good, honest, straightforward, business men as commissioners to give the city the kind of government it should have.

The campaign that has just closed was a campaign of education and the voters decided for themselves what kind of government they wanted. It is pretty safe to say the people know every time what they want and the government of any community is just what the majority want.

Superior also stepped into line as a commission city. Well, Mr. Vilcox also visited that city and gave an address or two, and he is now in Madison doing the same work, and we may expect the state capital to adopt it next week Tuesday.

Is it not cruel of those Madison leaders to promise to retire from the imperial field and then suddenly decide to change their minds and start raising an army to fight the followers of the republic?

The Women's clubs of the state have selected Janesville as their next meeting place. Prepare your best, Miss Janesville, and get ready for company.

It would appear as though Wisconsin's senator had done some rapid reorganizing these past few days since Senator Cummins appeared in the field.

It looks as though friends of Taft and Roosevelt might get these two interesting gentlemen together again, at least so they are on speaking terms.

Roosevelt is still keeping very quiet and has nothing to say. He, however, chops down a few trees and does other strenuous stunts.

Now that the ice is all harvested a little warm weather would not be objected to by anyone.

EXPURGE THE MOMENT

YES, INDEED!
 Being happy's not so hard
 When you own
 Your house and yard
 And you've got a lot of dough
 That is all your own to blow;
 When you know your balance grows,
 And you can afford to know,
 And when you can live "just so"
 And can well afford to throw
 Your money to the wind;
 When the dollars to you flow
 And you have all you can stow,
 And your credit's never low,
 And you can go in for "show"
 That's a cinch.

But it's not a cinch so fine
 To be happy, friend of mine;
 When you're very badly bent
 And you haven't got a cent;
 When your last kopek is spent
 And you've got to pay your rent
 And you can't get what you've lent
 When, at least to some extent,
 Your friends question your intent
 And you're dressed just like the gent
 In the comic supplement
 And are spurned where once you went
 By unassuming consent;
 That is very different;
 Yes, indeed!

OUR FURNACE SYMPOSIUM.
 Mrs. T. G. B. writes: "There is one thing about our furnace that I would like to know. On a reasonably warm day when we need but very little heat, our furnace of coal will make our furnace throw a fit, and the heat will shoot up out of the registers enough to blow a person's hat off, but on a cold day we can heap in the coal and open all the drafts and not get a whisper of heat from any of the openings. It's a mystery to me. Seems like on a cold day our registers draw in the air instead of shooting it out."

N. H. T. says: "At one o'clock yesterday morning when I got home from the lodge I put $4.75 worth of coke in my furnace, opened up the gaskiller and smokestack, let down the gaskiller, shut up the draft, fastened down the life boats, battened the hatches, yanked upon the jibcrack and loosened up all the set screws needed to directions. When I awoke at six o'clock the furnace fire was out. Wouldn't that wrinkle your forehead?"

"Later—I have just discovered that it was six o'clock on the second morning that I got up. I overslept one day and a night, so it was not the fault of the lodge. Pardon me for bothering you at all."

R. T. C. writes: "My furnace has caught a bad cold and I think it is rapidly running into pneumonia. It has chills constantly, but I have not noticed any symptoms resembling a fever for some time. Its digestion seems to be perfect and it has a surprising appetite. I can't quite make out what to do for it. It does not seem to respond to ordinary treatment. Maybe if I wrapped it up in red flannel blankets it would help. Its temperature is very low and it seems to take very little interest in life. I ask for suggestions and best wishes."

DIPPED FROM THE STREAM
 Now they say Mona Lisa is a moving picture because she doesn't stay long in one place. That comes near being a merry quip.

Perhaps that Paris editor refused to fight a duel with a woman because he does not know how to handle a hatpin.

An English traveler says he sees a great many freed men and women on the streets in America. Yes, some of the English travelers make most of us tired.

Of all the folks who have a chance for the presidency Joe Folk seems to have about the last.

The prime crop is reported 50,000,000 pounds short this year, and if this is so life in the boarding house should begin to grow lively.

Letty is Green's old bachelor son says he is going to marry a perfect woman, but he will have trouble finding a woman who hasn't a little false hair.

An eastern man has invented a furnace which he says will cool a house instead of heating it, but almost any furnace will do that.

A Michigan woman wants a divorce because her husband talks in his sleep, but maybe that is the only chance he gets.

THE SCIENTIFIC AGE.
 The development of science is a wonderful thing to see.

How they used to do without it is a mystery to me.

When the old folks used to linger in this mundane vale of tears

Till they reached the ripe old age of just about a hundred years;

When they didn't spend on doctor's bills a solitary cent,

And each one had his appendix to take with him when he went.

There was no optometrist to fix their eyes and make 'em see,

But a ninety-year-old man could read fine print like a child he.

When their eyes at last went back on 'em they had no great expense,

But purchased steel-rimmed spectacles that cost 'em forty cents.

No infantile paralysis or brain fog in that day;

They lived along until they just died up and blew it.

Seems as though it's mighty hard just now to keep out of the ground;

There is some new fangled ailment every time you turn around.

When a fellow's feeling healthy and he looks it in the face,

They're sure to find some new disease and make it fit his case.

To be ill, about something seems to be the howling rage,

And it's hard to live at all in this scientific age.

ONE KIND OF A SALE.
 There is nothing like being quite frank in dealing with customers or prospective customers.

In a local store window there is the following sign painted.

CHAMBERLAIN'S SKIN SALVE

Percy—Yes, a couple gear automobile will carry either an engaged or a married couple, or a couple that is neither.

NOTHING MUCH TO DO.
 Young men who are casting longing eyes on good jobs with circumspect should stop and consider the gentle, mainly brown agent.

"No I don't have very much to do to do is to get off the train at three or four o'clock in the morning and go out to the grounds and help the office force get the ticket wagon straightened out. I then grind out a list of names and go down town and call press the papers. I have to get on the back in time to ride on one of the wagons in the parade and call the attention of the delegates to the grand free performances which will be given outside the tent before the show."

"Then I have to go into the big tent and pass out the reserved tickets and pass out the reserved tickets and pass out the reserved tickets."

Heart to Heart Talks.

By EDWIN A. NYE.

A LESSON FOR PARENTS.
 This is a pitiful story—with a warning.

In a Massachusetts town three sons of an old man were brought into court to show cause why they should not support their aged father, who was in the poor farm. The brothers were well to do farmers.

The old man's story:

"A few years ago I owned a good farm. When my wife died I made a trade with my sons by which I should be kept the rest of my life in return for my property."

And then—

"As soon as the papers were signed things began to go hard with me. Frequently I was left starved and had to apply to the neighbors for food. I grew thin and was poor both in food and in clothing."

Poor old man, compelled to go "over the hills to the poor house," in evident terror of his sons! He pathetically implored, should the court decree that his children owed him a living, that he should spend the rest of his days in the institution. No better evidence of his mistreatment could be afforded than that he should fear being turned over to the mercies of his sons.

An unusual case? Not at all. Almost every one personally knows of such instances. Unfortunately it is all too common to know "how sharper than a serpent's tooth it is to have a thankless child."

Luther King Lear made the mistake of dividing his possessions before his death, exclaiming when it was all too late—

Ingratitude, thou marble-hearted fiend,
 More hideous when thou show'st in a child
 Than the sea monster."

It may be there are more Cordelias than Regans and Gonerils in this world, but Lear was not the first wretched old man to wonder an outcast in the wintry fields—nor the last.

The lesson is plain:

Parents who have property should carefully retain sufficient to keep them in their old age. Children will be the better off for waiting until the old folks are gone. And the parents' old folks will be sure of attention and respect from the children. Ingratitude of children is a crying evil of our money-grabbing day.

"But not my children?"

No, not your children, doubtless, but—why tempt them?

Generous Assortments and Splendid Values Still Rule at Our "World of White"

Enthusiasm increases as the event progresses.

Even better values rule for reserve stocks are brought forward and diminished prices are placed on broken lots.

White goods are on the list of daily needs of all the year demand. Why not benefit by so good an opportunity as this to select satisfactorily from unusually large assortments, bettered qualities and bigger values.

Market conditions change—the tendency of White Goods cost is upward. We placed large orders when materials were lower and shops and mills not so busy. Foresightedness—planning ahead—enabled us to obtain these exception values.

SESSIONS OF BOARD OF REVIEW CLOSED

Last Complaints on Valuations Fixed by Re-Assessment Heard Tomorrow.—Rock River Machine Company Appeals.

The Board of Review, appointed by the State Tax Commission to hear and pass judgment upon demands for reductions or corrections in the valuations of Janesville property made in the recent reassessment of the city by the assessors of the commission, closed their hearings tomorrow. With the exception of Saturday and Monday morning of this week they have been in session continuously at the city hall during the announced hours since the first of last week. Most of the complaints made were on small holdings but a few involved expensive real estate, notably some of the most valuable residence property in the city.

Attorney George Sutherland yesterday appeared before the board in the interests of the Rock River Machine Company who protested that their assessed valuation, $18,350, was excessive. They did not ask for a specific reduction, but averred that the assessment of the real estate, $13,100 was too high.

Mr. Sutherland, in his own behalf, asked that the valuation of his residence be reduced from $12,500 to $10,000, and that the assessment of his business block over the river be reduced from $24,550, the value placed on it by the assessors.

A reduction in the assessment of the improvements on his residence from $1,600 to $4,200, was requested by H. J. Cunningham.

The board and assessors will stay in the city for two or three days until all alterations in the books have been completed and the rolls declared closed. H. Van Cowles who has been appointed income tax assessor for Janesville, the appointment having been made from the list furnished by the Civil Service Commission, has been connected with the statistical department of the tax commission since 1905.

WEATHER BUREAU
WILLIS L. MOORE, Chief

The barometric depression that was over New England yesterday is now off the coast. It continued to cause light snows in the lower Lake Region and St. Lawrence valley during the night.
Fair weather prevails generally throughout the Central States, with lower temperatures. These are partly the result of the northerly winds following the barometric depression now off the New England coast, and partly the result of more rapid radiation of heat through the clear skies at night.
Another barometric depression is approaching the north Pacific coast and will advance eastward and produce increasing cloudiness and rising temperature throughout the Central States tonight and Thursday. In this vicinity it will be more or less cloudy and slightly warmer tonight and Thursday. The temperature will rise high.

Col. George Harvey was yesterday told by presidential aspirant Governor Wilson that his services were not needed in connection with his home. The recent editorial comment by Col. Waterson has brought this incident into the foreground as an important factor in the 1912 fight.
Austrian Red Tape.
At Koplat, near Buda, in January last, a miner named Brzek risked his life in saving a boy from drowning. His heroic action cost him a severe cold, resulting in a long sickness. On the advice of friends, he appealed to the authorities for some assistance. After a delay of several weeks he received an answer informing him that he had been fined one crown because he had omitted to place the proper stamp on his petition for help. Austrian red tape could scarcely go farther.—Prague correspondence Pall Mall Gazette.

HEART AND HOME TALKS
BY BARBARA BOYD

Should She Wed a Homely Man?

IT seems rather astounding that a girl who writes a letter that shows externally the signs of a fair education should propound a query that shows such superficiality as this:

"Would you advise me to marry a young business man, who is considered by all who know him a perfect gentleman, with a good character, and who dresses well, too, but who is not good-looking? I like him, but it hurts my pride to introduce him to my friends, because he is so homely. I know they make remarks about his looks among themselves. My parents tell me I should not mind his looks; but I am good-looking myself, and I am a little sensitive about going around with such a homely man."

Most assuredly do I tell her not to marry him. And he ought to thank a beneficent providence for his escape.

But I do not tell her that to marry him because he is homely, but because she does not love him. Please note that. A girl who will stand and quibble over such a matter hasn't a spark of love in her heart for the man. She is simply being tempted by certain worldly advantages he may possess, and is wondering if she can endure his looks for the sake of what he will give her. And such a girl is not worthy of a good man's love. She is too shallow to appreciate what he is giving her.

The homeliest person has beauty for the eye of love. And real beauty, after all is the character that shines through the features, and not the features themselves. Circassian eyes and a Greek nose and a Cupid-bow mouth soon lose all charm, if selfishness and ill-temper and vanity are expressed by them. The pleasure that may be found in the occasional society of beauty is a vastly different thing, from what is felt, when you live with that beauty day in and out, and find it is only a mask for unpleasant traits of character. And the eyes that express love, and the lips that voice cheerfulness and kindness soon grow beautiful, when they stand for a daily thoughtfulness and consideration that make life a joy.

A fine character wins respect and regard; and if this man has the character he will be liked by all except the very shallowest, irrespective of his looks. And no true woman will feel her pride is hurt by being the wife of such a man; but rather will she have reason to be proud of him, for the fine things he stands for.

This girl is foolish to take so superficial a view of one of the most serious matters of life. Good looks are not to be despised, for beauty is one of the joys of life. But there must be linked to it, the beauty of character, to be really satisfying. And if there is beauty of character, the features, in matter, how homely they may seem at first glance, will soon intangibly reflect it.

The girl who marries for looks alone will be apt to find she has Dead Sea fruit, before many years of married life have passed. To get the best out of life, one should take a deeper view of its realities than this.

Barbara Boyd.

The Evening Chit-Chat

BY RUTH CAMERON

IN A RECENT magazine story, an enormously wealthy and eccentric man is described as entertaining his guests, by telling them how much he paid for this or that article of food, furniture or apparel.

The description is supposed to be a very much overdrawn satire on the American people's way of thinking and talking continually of the price of everything.

Is it so much overdrawn, I wonder? Listen to the account which a friend of mine gave me of her visit to a friend who has recently inherited some money and, not being able to think or talk of anything but money since that event.

"Of course, they told me how much their new house, the furnishings, all their lovely new gowns and their automobile cost. I expected that. If it had only stopped there. But it didn't. I admired the beautiful lawn that adjoins their place, and they said yes, it is a fine lawn, and just think it costs the owner between three and four hundred a year to keep that lawn and the trees around it in order, to say nothing of the flower beds."

"At dinner I remarked on the fine flavor of some oranges, and Mr. G., who used to be a well-to-do man, said they ought to be for the day they cost a dollar a dozen. It reminded me of the time Mark Twain was told by his hostess that the grapes he was eating cost ten cents apiece and answered that if she pleased he'd like eighty cents worth more."

"My friend had recently announced her engagement and I thought I was safe from prices in admiring her engagement ring, but I wasn't. I was promptly told that a diamond engagement ring had cost her at least five hundred dollars."

"In the afternoon we went to church, and in the middle of a beautiful cantata solo, Mrs. G. whispered to me that the soloist got $150 for a single performance."

"I was also informed that the minister was paid ten thousand a year, and that the average collection was $500 a Sunday."

"Of course, I haven't told you near all the price quotations I received that day. I can't remember them all, but these are fair samples. Anyhow, I went home—went to bed and dreamed that I was a ten thousand dollar bill and that Mr. G. had just spent me to buy some good taste for Mrs. G. and was telling her friends who admired her taste, what it cost."

Could the magazine satire be any worse than that experience? Could it be any worse than the examples which we all see every day, of the continual application of the standard of cost to things which should be measured by their utility, beauty, or by even higher standards?

Truly, I think it is appalling—this "what-it-costs" mania that seems to have possessed the American people.

What ARE we going to do about it?

Thought for Today

BY MRS. ROBERT M. LAPOLETTE.

LIVING WAGE.

WHEN Governor Foss selected a commission to investigate and report as to the advisability of the establishment of Minimum Wage Boards in Massachusetts, he very appropriately appointed as the woman representative Mrs. Glendower Evans, who is one of the best posted women in the country on wage matters and the conditions under which they work. A woman of independent means, she was one of the first to recognize the responsibility of wealth to look to how their money is spent, in the first place, to take prominent part in the Roxbury Carpet Strike, this Boston gentlewoman, standing shoulder to shoulder with the factory girls, protecting them from intimidation, insisting on the fundamental principles of liberty, her example has been a strong influence in opening up a new field of mutual aid, fellowship and democracy among women.

In an interview in the Boston American, Mrs. Evans is quoted as saying that forty per cent of the girls over eighteen years of age, engaged in the three leading industries of Massachusetts, are earning less than six dollars a week. This is exclusive of the girls under eighteen, who, if included, would increase the percentage by twenty per cent. Six dollars a week is not a living wage under existing conditions, declares Mrs. Evans. "There is nothing in the act under which we are sitting," she says, "that instructs us to decide how much it ought to cost a person to live, nor to recommend any fixed sum that should be paid. The proposition is whether questions of this sort should be referred to wage boards, or left to employers, irrespective of what it costs labor to exist." No one will doubt Mrs. Evans' choice of these two alternatives.

The report of the Committee, promised in January, will be watched for with great interest and have far-reaching influence.

IN WHOM men condemn as

I find so much of goodness still, in men whom men pronounce divine, I find so much sin and blot, I hesitate to draw the line. Between the two, the line is thin. —Joachim Miller.

PREPARING FISH WITH SAUCES.

In most homes fish finds its way upon our tables at least once a week. It is easily digested when fresh, and makes a pleasant change in the menu.

In choosing fish, see that the eyes are bright and the flesh firm.

To bone fish, which is not a difficult process, cut down to the back bone and with a dull knife press the flesh away from the bone on one side then on the other. There is no more waste in boning fish than when left to be boned at the table.

Broiled Fish.—Clean and bone the fish and cut it through from the middle so that it will lay flat. Grease the bars of a wire broiler with salt pork. Lay in the fish and broil over coals or under gas flame. Broil the fish side first, to keep in the juices. Turn and cook the skin side. When taken from the broiler season with salt and pepper and serve with any desired sauce.

Baked Fish.—Clean fish but do not remove the tail; sprinkle with salt and fill with bread stuffing that has been well seasoned with onion juice. Sew up and lay on a greased rack in a baking pan. Lay a few slices of salt pork over the fish to bake it while roasting, and bake thirty to forty minutes, according to size. Remove carefully, not to break it. Garnish with parsley and quarters of lemon.

Halibut Steak.—Have a slice about an inch and a half thick. Wash and wipe dry. Butter the bottom of a baking dish, sprinkle with grated onion, chopped parsley, salt and pepper. Lay the fish on the seasoning, brush it with egg yolk and cover with more seasoning, adding lemon and soft butter. Bake twenty minutes in a moderate oven.

Pickled Sauce.—Make a drawn butter sauce with one tablespoonful each of butter and flour, a cup of boiling water, and salt and pepper to taste. Just before serving add a half tablespoon of butter, a tablespoon each of chopped onion, pickles, olives, capers and a dusting of salt and cayenne. The pickles may be varied, according to taste.

UP-TO-DATE HOUSEKEEPING.

Cooked Bananas More Healthful than Raw Fritters, Salads, Desserts

By Alice E. Whitaker.

The banana man now comes to almost every house and his fruit makes an agreeable addition to the native supply of fruit that is limited at this season to apples only. Bananas are more digestible when eaten raw and although they are a favorite with children it is not safe to allow young children to eat them alone as they come to the northern markets not much more than half ripe.

The skin of the banana should be taken off and the pulp to be eaten before it is really ripe. It is not profitable for the fruit to keep them near the verge of decay and in fact prejudice is against the appearance of the well ripened banana.

Among all the ways of cooking bananas a few selections are made. For fritters cut the bananas in halves crosswise and then lengthwise and dip in fritter batter. Fry in deep fat and serve with a lemon sauce made by cooking one cup of sugar with five tablespoons of water for eight minutes; if cooked longer they will thicken. Add one and one-half tablespoons of lemon juice and a rounding teaspoon of butter.

The fritter batter is made with one and one-half cups of flour sifted with two level teaspoons of baking powder. To this add one egg beaten, one cup of milk and a few grains of salt.

A different sort of fritter batter is made as follows: Beat the yolks of three eggs, add a salt spoon of salt and one cup of milk. Sift two cups of flour with three level teaspoons of baking powder and add to the mixture and last fold in the stiffly beaten whites of three eggs. Put half a dozen poelets and sliced bananas in the batter lightly and fry in spoonfuls in deep fat until well browned.

One way of baking bananas is to take a narrow strip from the side of each and set them in a baking pan close together. Bake with moderate heat about twenty minutes but if they seem to be done in less time take them up and sprinkle a few drops of lemon juice and a little powdered sugar over each. Or peel the bananas and set closely in a pan; sprinkle with lemon juice and a little sugar and dot with small bits of butter and bake.

Bananas merely sliced and dressed with oil and vinegar with the usual seasonings make an appetizing salad and an attractive one if served on lettuce leaves.

But for real company salad use mayonnaise. Peel and scrape off the fiber then cut in quarters across and

IMMUNITY FROM GERM DISEASES FOUND IN PERFECT NUTRITION.

It is the prevailing doctrine that most diseases, including consumption, rheumatism and diabetes, are caused by specific germs. Germs are the natural accompaniments of fermentation and while the products of fermentation will induce specific fermentations in dead matter, those vegetables and animal matters that are in a perfect state of nutrition and free from the accumulated waste matter which furnishes the foundation for fermentation are 'unfettered' for immunity to disease. The humor theory has passed out of modern medical science, but it may well be revived as the proper explanation for the specific germ or specific ferment theory, and the basis of natural immunity will then be found to be in perfect nutrition, which implies perfect elimination, both dependent upon perfect physical and perfect mental condition, existing only in the ideal, but furnishing a true scientific foundation for scientific medicine, a condition which all admit has yet to be realized.

CURIOUS BITS OF HISTORY.

HIS HAT WAS HIS FORTUNE.

By A. W. MACY.

In the year 1680 William Murdock, an English millwright, was traveling along a country road one day, footsore and tired. Coming to a factory, he stopped at the door and asked for work of some kind. The proprietor was about to turn him away when he noticed that he wore an oval-shaped hat. This was something new in the way of headgear, and it excited the proprietor's curiosity. "Where did you get it?" he asked. "I just turned it on my lathe," answered Murdock. "But it's oval, not round," said the proprietor. "And lathe turned things round," "Well," answered Murdock, "I just geared the machine another gear to suit me." He had indeed invented the oval lathe and didn't know it. The proprietor saw that a man who could turn out an oval hat with a lathe was too valuable a man to lose sight of, and gave him employment. The hat proved to be the foundation of both fame and fortune. Murdock also constructed the first wheeled vehicle propelled by steam in England.

Baking Powder Biscuits

Light as a Feather

By Mrs. Janet McKenzie Hill, Editor of the Boston Cooking School Magazine

Baking Powder Biscuits made by this recipe are so far ahead of ordinary baking powder biscuits that, if once tried, you will never use any other recipe. Try it the next time you run short of bread. Save this recipe.

K C Baking Powder Biscuits

Three cups flour; 3/4 to 1 cup shortening; 3 level teaspoons K C Baking Powder; about 1 cup milk or water; 1 teaspoonful salt.

Sift three times, the flour, salt and baking powder. Work into the flour the shortening, using lard or butter for shortening. Then mix to a very soft dough with the milk. The softer the biscuit enters the oven, the lighter it comes out. Never knead baking powder biscuits; press the dough into shape and roll lightly. Cut in small shapes and bake on a sheet or very shallow pan in a hot oven. In placing biscuits in the pans place well together, so that the tops touch. Small biscuits are better than large ones. Large biscuits do not have to be baked a longer time to raise and bake.

Have you seen the new K C Baking Powder? It's a new recipe that simply must be successful every time. It's the new recipe that's been carefully followed. You would gladly pay 20 cents for this valuable book, yet we find it absolutely free upon receipt of the enclosed card. Just send your card to K C Baking Powder, Janesville, Wis. The Secret of Success

GENUINE MERIT REQUIRED TO WIN THE PEOPLE'S CONFIDENCE.

Have you ever stopped to reason why it is that so many products that are extensively advertised, all at once drop out of sight and are soon forgotten? The reason is plain—the article did not fulfill the promise of the manufacturer. This applies more particularly to a medicine. A medical preparation that has real curative value almost sells itself, as like an endless chain system the remedy is recommended by those who have been cured, to those who are in need of it.

In an interview on the subject a prominent local druggist says: "Take for example Dr. Kilmer's Swamp-Root, a preparation I have sold for many years and never hesitate to recommend, for in almost every case it shows immediate results, as many of my customers testify. No other kidney remedy that I know of has so large a sale."

The success of Dr. Kilmer's Swamp-Root is due to the fact that it fulfills every wish in overcoming kidney, liver and bladder disorders, corrects urinary troubles and neutralizes the uric acid which causes rheumatism.

A free trial bottle will be sent by mail, absolutely free. Address Dr. Kilmer & Co., Hinghamton, N. Y., and mention this paper. Regular size bottles sold at all druggists—50c, and $1.00.

THEY ALL DEMAND IT

Janesville, Like Every City and Town in the Union, Receives It.

People with kidney ills want to be cured. When one suffers the tortures of an aching back, relief is eagerly sought for. There are many remedies today that relieve, but do not cure. Doan's Kidney Pills have cured thousands. Here is proof:

Hirt Lullingswell, 629 Jackson St., Detroit, Wis., says: "I began using Doan's Kidney Pills about ten years ago and obtained the most satisfactory results. At that time I had an attack of backache, which clung to me persistently, and gradually grew worse. I finally found that my kidneys were weak and accordingly procured a box of Doan's Kidney Pills. In a short time the kidneys were restored to their normal condition and I felt like my old self again. Recently when my kidneys were disordered, I used Doan's Kidney Pills and I again received the desired results. I hope that other sufferers of kidney complaint will give Doan's Kidney Pills a trial."

NEAT MAJORITY IN FAVOR OF CHANGE TO A COMMISSION

VOTERS OF JANESVILLE GIVE PROPOSED PLAN SPLENDID ENDORSEMENT AT POLLS.

TOTAL VOTE WAS LARGE

Two Hundred and Four Majority in Favor of Plan—Much Interest Shown in Outcome.

Janesville decided, by a majority of two hundred and four, to adopt the commission form of government at Tuesday's election. Two years ago, on the 11th day of January, it rejected the proposition by a majority of four hundred ninety-five. Yesterday the friends of commission government carried three wards of the city by handsome majorities, while two years ago they carried but one, the Third, and that only by a narrow margin.

On Tuesday the total vote cast was 2,182, of which 1,193 favored the change and 989 were against it. Two years ago the total vote cast was 1,639, of which number 1,017 opposed to the change and 622 favored it. Two years ago both sides used rigs and autos to haul the voters to the polls, while yesterday, under the corrupt practices law provisions, they were not allowed, and still a much heavier vote was polled than two years ago.

Two years ago the opponents to the law rejected it on the grounds that it did not have the recall and referendum provisions, while with these clauses attached to the law by the last legislature they accepted it. While perhaps this is not the only reason for yesterday's victory in favor of the change, still it played an important part in the final result.

It might be interesting to note, in connection with this question, that the original law, the one passed by the legislature of 1909, which did not have the referendum and recall provisions, was drafted and introduced by State Senator John M. Whitehead of this city. However, Senator Whitehead had no part in the alterations that the law received at the hands of the last legislature.

The contest fought out yesterday was clean and defined. The attempt of the opponents of the measure to cloud the issue by infusing personalities and corporations into the discussion fell by the wayside of their own argument and the voters cast their ballot for or against a radical only of the proposition of securing Janesville a good, stable, business-like form of government.

It is interesting to compare the vote of yesterday with that of two years ago, ward by ward. In the first ward in 1910 there were 174 votes cast against it, and 132 for it. In 1912, 161 votes were cast against it and 232 for it. In the second ward in 1910 there were 173 votes against it and 104 favoring it. In 1912, 167 against it and 218 favored it.

In the third ward in 1910, 200 opposed the plan and 217 favored it. In 1912, 160 opposed, the plan and 387 favored it. In the fourth ward in 1910, there were 312 votes opposing it and 104 in favor. In 1912 there were 320 opposing and 241 in favor. In the fifth ward in 1910 the vote against the change was 156 and 140 favored it. In 1912 there were 175 who voted against it and 315 who favored it.

Throughout the city there were many cases where the voters failed to register their vote and the total number of persons who went to the polls was greater than the total number of votes really registered. This was due to the fact the voter did not fully understand how to pull the proper levers, and while it is regrettable, it did not have any material difference in the final result.

It was but a few seconds after seven when the first reports were telephoned to the Gazette office, the fifth ward holding the honor, followed less than a minute afterward by the first, the second, and third. The fourth was the last to be received. While it was seen the commission had carried, the final figures were not obtained until a correction in the first ward vote was made, the result having been read wrongly from the back of the machine, the two votes being reversed.

The Gazette had three telephones and men stationed at each of them answered excited inquiries for close two hours after the polls had closed. Aside from that the office was crowded with interested citizens who viewed the results chalked on the big bulletin boards so all could see them.

The day was really an exciting one and while both the friends and opponents of the measure expressed confidence in their opinions that it would be carried or defeated, the result was not known until the final vote was counted. Considerable money was handed throughout the city, the bets being even and not unprofitable.

That the vote was so much larger than two years ago, in view of the fact the voters had to walk to the polls and carriages were not permitted, shows that it is the real voice of the people that have spoken and not any one element which might have colonized the voters in certain wards. Several of the large factories gave their employees an hour off in the morning to cast their vote and this helped swell the total.

The vote in the fourth and fifth wards in favor of the measure was a surprise even to the friends of the change. The Fifth, while it gave a majority against it and stood by its two aldermen, also handed them some official a rebuke by casting seventy-five more votes favoring it than they did two years ago.

Whether it was the presence of the recall provision in the law that added in its passage or whether the theory that a change which would do away with the present form of city government would be a good thing after the present troublesome times in the council session will not be known, but it is safe to say that both played their part.

GETTLE GIVES REPLY TO HIRST'S LETTER

Explains His Standing on New State Highway Act and Indicates Sections in Law.

Editor Janesville Gazette.
Dear Sir: In your issue of January 22, Mr. H. H. Hirst, in behalf of the State Highway Commission, seems greatly alarmed by reason of a discussion of the new state highway law and especially some erroneous interpretation alleged to have been made by me before our county board. It will be noticed that Mr. Hirst merely sets up his opinion against mine. I do not quote the statute.

What I said before the county board was that our county highway system already included the 15 per cent of the total highway mileage to which the law seems to limit the state system. One hundred and four miles of the two miles included in our county have already been improved.

The statute affecting this question is Sec. 1311m-31, and reads: "The systems of prospective county highways which have been selected by the various county boards pursuant to Sec. 1311-10—Chap. 487, laws of 1907 or Section 1311p (Chap. 552, laws of 1907) of the statutes shall be known as the county systems of prospective state highways. Each county board which has not already selected such a system shall make provision for a system of prospective state highways at their first regular meeting after the passage and publication of this act. The system shall at first include not to exceed 15 per cent of the road mileage of the county, etc."

Later in the act it is provided that addition to the system can only be made with the approval of the state commission. "The county has, under the law, absolutely no right to make an extension except by the grace and favor of the highway hierarchy at Madison."

Rock county was going along splendidly in its road building, leading every other county in the state before the new law made us dependent on the paternalistic favors of the new commission.

Is not Mr. Hirst assuming a pretty pharisaical attitude when he even impeaches the honesty of those in this county who propose to entertain opinions of the law which have not been subjected to his censorship for approval?

I want to see the law work out well in the whole state, but it will fall if administered in the spirit of Mr. Hirst's accusing criticism of our discussion. Very sincerely,
L. D. GETTLE.

"Yes, you must go," said the doctor, with his pleasant smile.
"I am not ill now," said Christine suddenly, with strange and unexpected energy.
She rose and passed her hand over her eyelids.

"Thank you, doctor. Please go away, all of you. Leave me."
The doctor tried to make a short protest, but, perceiving the girl's evident agitation, he thought the best remedy was not to thwart her. And he went away, saying to Raoul, outside:

"She is not herself tonight. She is usually so gentle."
Then he said good night and Raoul was left alone.

Suddenly the dressing-room door opened and the maid came out by herself, carrying bundles. He stopped her and asked how her mistress was. The woman said that she was quite well. And she passed on. One idea alone filled Raoul's burning brain: of course, Raoul wished to be left alone for him. Had he not told her that he wanted to speak to her privately?

Hardly breathing, he went up to the dressing-room and, with his ear to the door to catch her reply, prepared to knock. But his hand dropped. He had heard a man's voice in the dressing-room, saying, in a matter-of-fact tone:

"Christine, you must love me!"

And Christine's voice, infinitely sad and trembling, as though accompanied by tears, replied:

"How can you talk like that? When I sing only for you!"

Raoul leaned against the panel to ease his pain. His heart, which had seemed gone forever, returned to his breast and was throbbing loudly.

The man's voice spoke again:

"Are you very tired?"

"Oh, tonight I gave you my soul and I am dead!" Christine replied.

"Your soul is a beautiful thing, child," replied the grave man's voice, "and I thank you. No emperor ever received so fair a gift. The angels wept tonight."

Raoul heard nothing after that. Nevertheless, he did not go away, but, as though he feared lest he should be caught, he returned to his dark corner, determined to wait for the man to leave the room. To his great astonishment, the door opened and Christine Dane appeared, wrapped in furs, with her face hidden in a lace veil, alone. She passed him. He did not even follow her with his eyes, for his eyes were fixed on the door, which did not open again.

When the passage was once more

There was no one in the room.

Deserted, he crossed it, opened the door of the dressing-room, went in and shut the door. He found himself in absolute darkness. The gas had been turned out.

"There is some one here!" said Raoul, with his back against the closed door, in a quivering voice.

"What are you hiding for?"

All was darkness and silence.

He struck a match. The flame lit up the room. There was no one in the room!

CHAPTER III.

The Mysterious Reason.

During this time, the farrow ceremony was taking place. Everybody remarked that the retiring managers looked cheerful, as in the Paris way. The foyer of the ballet in the last place in which two men so "knowing" as M. Deblenne and M. Poligny would have made the mistake of betraying their grief, however genuine it might be. And they were already smiling rather too broadly upon Sorrell, who had begun to recite her speech, when an exclamation from Jammes broke the smile brutally.

"The opera ghost!" Jammes yelled these words in a tone of unspeakable terror; and her finger pointed, among the crowd of chandeliers, to a face so pallid that the death's head in question immediately scored a huge success.

"The opera ghost!" Everybody laughed and pushed his neighbor and wanted to offer the opera ghost a drink, but he was gone. He had slipped through the crowd; and the others vainly hunted for him, while two old gentlemen tried to calm little Jammes and while little Giry stood screaming like a peacock.

Sorrell was furious; she had not been able to finish her speech; the managers had flung her, thanked her and run away as fast as the ghost himself. They were to receive their personal friends, for the last time, in the great lobby outside the managers' office, where the supper would be served.

Here they found the new managers, M. Armand Moncharmin and M. Firmin Richard, whom they hardly knew; nevertheless, they were lavish in protestations of friendship and received flattering compliments in reply.

The retiring managers had already handed over to their successors the two tiny masterkeys which opened all the doors—thousands of doors—of the opera house. And those keys were being passed from hand to hand, when the attention of some of the guests was diverted by their discovery, at the end of the table, of that strange, wan and fantastic face, with the hollow eyes, which had already appeared in the foyer of the ballet.

"The opera ghost!" There sat the ghost, as natural as could be, except that he neither ate nor drank.

He did not speak a word and his neighbors could not have stated at what moment he had sat down between them. The friends of Richard and Moncharmin thought that this skinny guest was an acquaintance of Deblenne's or Poligny's, while Deblenne and Poligny's friends believed that the cadaverous individual belonged to Richard and Moncharmin's party.

The result was that no request was made for an explanation.

M. Deblenne and Poligny, sitting at the center of the table, had not seen the man with the death's head. Suddenly he began to speak.

"The ballet-girls are right," he said. "The death of that poor Raoul is perhaps not so natural as people think."

Deblenne and Poligny gave a start. "Is Raoul dead?" they cried.

"Yes," replied the man, or the shadow of a man, quietly. "He was found, this evening, hanging in the third cellar, between a farm-house and a scene from the Hotel de Lahore."

The two managers, or rather ex-managers, at once rose and stared strangely at the speaker. At last Deblenne made a sign to M. Richard and Moncharmin; Poligny muttered a few words of excuse to the guests; and all four went into the managers' office. I leave M. Moncharmin to complete the story. In his Memoirs, he says:

"M. Deblenne and Poligny seemed to grow more and more excited. First, they asked us if we knew the man, sitting at the end of the table, who had told them of the death of Joseph Raoul; and, when we answered in the negative, they looked still more concerned. They took the masterkeys from our hands, stared at them for a moment and advised us to have new locks made, with the greatest secrecy, for the rooms, closets and passages that we might wish to have hermetically closed. They said this so faintly that we began to laugh and to ask if there were thieves at the opera. They replied that there was something worse, which was the ghost."

They told us that they never would have spoken to us of the ghost if they had not received formal orders from the ghost himself to ask us to be pleasant to him. They had hesitated to tell us this curious story, which our skeptical minds were certainly not prepared to entertain. But the announcement of the death of Joseph Raoul had served them as a brutal reminder that, whenever they had disregarded the ghost's wishes, some disastrous event had brought them to a sense of their dependence."

"The joke became a little tedious; and Richard asked half-seriously, and half in jest:

"But, after all, what does this ghost or yours want?"

"M. Poligny went to his desk and returned with a copy of the memorandum-book. The memorandum-book ends with Clause 98, which says that the privilege can be withdrawn if the manager infringes the conditions stipulated. This is followed by the conditions, which are four in number."

"The copy produced by M. Poligny was written in black ink and exactly similar to that in our possession, except that, at the end, it contained a paragraph in red ink and in a queer handwriting. This paragraph ran as follows:

"5. Or if the manager, in any month, delay for more than a fortnight the payment of the allowance which he shall make to the opera ghost of twenty thousand francs a month."

"Is this all? Does he not want anything else?" asked Richard, with the greatest coolness.

"Yes, he does," replied Poligny. "Box Five on the grand tier shall be placed at the disposal of the opera ghost for every performance."

"When we saw this, there was nothing else for us to do but to rise from our chairs, shake our two predecessors warmly by the hand and congratulate them on thinking of this charming little joke, which proved that the old French sense of humor was never likely to become extinct."

"Thereupon we all four left the office. Richard and I had never laughed so much in our lives."

CHAPTER IV.

Box Five.

Armand Moncharmin wrote such voluminous Memoirs during the fairly long period of his co-management that we may well ask if he ever found time to attend to the affairs of the opera otherwise than by telling what went on there. M. Moncharmin did not know a note of music, but he called the minister of education and fine arts by his Christian name, had dabbled a little in society journalism and enjoyed a considerable private income. Lastly, he was a charming fellow and showed that he was not lacking in intelligence, for, as soon as he made up his mind to be a sleeping partner in the opera, he selected the best possible active manager and went straight to Firmin Richard.

Firmin Richard was a very distinguished composer, who had published a number of successful pieces of all kinds and who liked nearly every form of music and every sort of musician. Clearly, therefore, it was the duty of every sort of musician to like M. Firmin Richard. The only things that he said against him were that he was rather masterful in his ways and endowed with a very hasty temper.

The first few days which the partners spent at the opera were given over to the delight of finding themselves the head of no magnificent enterprise, and they had forgotten all about (the ridiculous, fantastic story of the ghost, when an incident occurred that proved to them that the joke—if joke it was—was not over. M. Firmin Richard reached his office that morning at eleven o'clock. His secretary, M. Remy, showed him half a dozen letters which he had not opened because they were marked "private." One of the letters had at once attracted Richard's attention not only because the envelope was addressed in red ink, but because he seemed to have seen the writing before. He soon remembered that it was the red handwriting in which the memorandum-book had been so curiously completed. He recognized the clumsy childish hand. He opened the letter and read:

"Dear Mr. Manager:

"I am sorry to have to trouble you at a time when you must be so very busy, renewing important engagements, signing fresh ones and generally displaying your excellent taste. I know what you have done for Carlotto, Sorrell and little Jammes and for a few others whose admirable qualities of talent or genius you have suspected."

"Of course, when I use these words, I do not mean to apply them to La Carlotto, who sings like a squirrel and who ought never to have been allowed to leave the Ambassadeurs and the Cafe Jacquin; nor to La Sorrell, who dances like a cat in a field. And I am not speaking of Christine Dane either, though her genius is certain, whereas your jealousy prevents her from creating any important part. When all is said, you are free to conduct your little business as you think best, are you not?"

"All the same, I should like to take advantage of the fact that you have not yet turned Christine Dane out of doors by hearing her this evening in the part of Slobol, as that of Marguerite has been forbidden her since her triumph of the other evening; and I will ask you not to dispose of my box today nor on the following days, for I cannot end this letter without telling you how disagreeably surprised I have been once or twice, to hear, on arriving at the opera, that my box had been sold, at the box-office, by your orders."

Made in Janesville

Of all the elements that go to make a city, none is so vital to its prosperous condition as the growth of its home manufacturing interests. A city to attract outside capital and to enlarge its population must show evidences of a capacity to furnish employment and opportunities for profitable investment. The citizens of Janesville should be loyal to the industries represented here.

The waitress at the Littlebat Inn smoothed her apron and turned, smiling, to her assistant. "There's a regular old countryman just come in," she whispered. "He's ordered a chowder first, the way they always do. When it comes to dessert I'm going to have some fun. You listen."

The old countryman was taking his last spoonful of chowder from his tilted plate when he became aware that the waitress was hovering near him. He looked up, and she spoke in a clear, carrying tone.

"We've got four kinds of pie," she said. "Which will you have?"

The shrewd old eyes twinkled up into the pretty, impudent face.

"I'll have a piece of the last," said the old countryman, gravely.—Youth's Companion.

WHERE THEY CUT YOUR HAIR
WHILE YOU WAIT.
"THAT'S GOOD. A BARBER
SHOP IS USUALLY A PLACE
WHERE THEY CUT SOME OTHER
MAN'S HAIR WHILE YOU WAIT."

HIS INNING.

The waitress at the Littlebat Inn smoothed her apron and turned, smiling, to her assistant. "There's a regular old countryman just come in," she whispered. "He's ordered a chowder first, the way they always do. When it comes to dessert I'm going to have some fun. You listen."

The old countryman was taking his last spoonful of chowder from his tilted plate when he became aware that the waitress was hovering near him. He looked up, and she spoke in a clear, carrying tone.

"We've got four kinds of pie," she said. "Which will you have?"

The shrewd old eyes twinkled up into the pretty, impudent face.

"I'll have a piece of the last," said the old countryman, gravely.—Youth's Companion.

Incoherent.

"Jobbins got rather mixed in his talk when he was telling me how meanly his so-called friend treated him."

"What did he say?"

"He said he got a raw deal when they cooked up that scheme."

How Hunter Was Hurt.

The hunter, who had been mistaken for a deer and shot, roused up and beckoned to the hospital nurse.

"Understand," he said, "I don't care so much about being killed, but it's this being made game of that hurts my feelings."

SIDEWALK SKETCHES

ALEXANDER THE GREAT
By HOWARD L. RANN.

ALEXANDER THE GREAT was a famous warrior who died at the age of 33 years, having conquered all of the known world and most of the suburbs. He was the most industrious and energetic conqueror we have ever had, and never stopped until he had run out of material. Alexander was a strict disciplinarian, and was the only one on record who could keep a squad of militia from looting in an army camp.

He was also the author of the army tactics used so successfully in the Chinese rebellion. Whenever Alexander came to a country whose citizens objected to being conquered he entered them in a new light by starting a large bonfire on the public square with a few thousand innocent bystanders as fuel. Alexander had several regular army officers on his payroll in order to show the militia how to "sweep out" without falling down, and after he had conquered everything from Butte, Montana, to the Milky Way the militia declared for the closed shop and started home. Alexander concealed his chagrin and the monthly pay checks and accompanied them, making a few important contributions to profane history en route. Alexander was deeply attached to his horse, Bucephalus, and when the animal succumbed to old age and the colic he had the attending veterinary surgeons strung up by the thumbs until they couldn't hit the floor on the rebound. He was very fastidious about his personal appearance, had his shirts made to order and always called for a close shave. He was married so many times that he finally committed the responses to memory and was thus able to dispense with the usual rehearsal at the home of the bride.

FORTY YEARS AGO

Janesville Gazette, Jan. 24, 1872:

Three Japanese sailors have arrived at Havana, out of a crew of twenty three, the remainder having died on a junk, which was disabled off the coast of Japan and drifted 2,000 miles, until they went ashore on the island of Adabo. They were nine months at sea.

The work of putting Forts Sumpter and Moultrie, in Charleston harbor in a defensible condition will begin at once.

The Trenton Banking Company have offered a reward of $15,000 for the arrest and conviction of the burglars who entered their bank on Sunday night, or $3,000 for one of them. The whole amount stolen was about $30,000.

Fred Douglas passed through St. Louis yesterday on his way to Greenville to deliver a lecture. He registered his name at the Hunter's house but was denied the privilege of dining there.

About $500 in ancient gold coins were unearthed in Philadelphia, on Monday, by laborers engaged in making an excavation for the bed of a new boiler, at the back of a house on North Street. Some of the coins were very old.

A runaway horse in Oshkosh jumped through the front window of a clothing store. He was looking for horse blankets.

Milwaukee with a population of 80,000, has had but three arrests for drunkenness in three days. Her police force needs reconstructing.

Engineer Luger has completed the survey of the railroad route between the city and Afton and will begin on the Shoshone line in a few days.

BY WALT MASON

Few men are fond of Major Gall. He is the man who knows it all, his voice is blustering and loud, and when he gets in to a crowd he drolly holds his trousers down, and what he says is final law. If you should say the weather's warm the major then will rant and storm, and say it's cold as all get out, and put your arguments to rout. If you concerning books and discourses, the major rises, thence and honore, and pushes language through his face, and shows that you are off your base. If you refer to works of art, he then upsets your apple cart, and proves your criticisms weak—you have no right to think or speak. No odds what subject may come up—a Grecian urn or better yet, a Roman bronze or Plutarch's "Lives," the groundhog or a case of hives, a sermon or a quilling bee, the major, with his neckerchief, hews down opponents old and young. And so men shy at Major Gall, that grand old sport who knows it all.

Blessing English Crops.

The quaint ceremony of blessing the crops was observed the other evening on the Earl of Craven's estate at Binley, in Northeast Warwickshire, says the London Daily Mail. Meeting at the parish church, the vicar and a number of parishioners formed into procession and various well-known farms were visited.
